Irving Admits Wife Had Swiss Account Listed 'H.R. Hughes'

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.-Mrs. Clifford Irving was named by the New-York County district attorney's office today as the mysterious Helga R. Rughes who opened then virtually emptied a Swiss bank account of $850,000 intended for Howard R. Hughes in connection with his purported auto-

David Worgan, executive assistant to District Attorney Frank S. Hogan, said "Irving told us that his wife opened the account and withdrew the bulk of the money and deposited it in another Swiss bank and it is still intact."

Earlier, Mr. Irving, through his new lawyer, Maurice Nessen, admitted that his wife had used the name "H. R. Hughes" to open the Swiss account. This was after he had been questioned for three hours by Leonard Newman, an assistant district attorney in the fraud

"Mr. Irving told me," Mr. Nessen said to reporters, "that My wife voluntarily told Swiss authorities about opening the account in the name of H.R. Bughes, and he came here today to tell Assistant District Attorney Newman the same thing."

As Mr. Nessen spoke, Mr. Irving stood beside him and nodded affirmatively.

Asked why Mrs. Irving had mened the Swiss bank account, the lawyer replied: "I can't say at this time. I just came into the case yesterday."

The lawyer also said he could not say whether Mrs. Irving had cashed the checks peid by McGraw-Hill for the publishing rights to the autobiography that Mr. Irving has insisted was distated to him by the re-clusing industrialist. The Swiss

By Carroll Kilpatrick WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (WP). President Nixon launched a new campaign against drug abuse to-day to fight what he called "the most despicable" of criminals—the drug pusher. He said he was instituting "a major new program to drive drug traffickers and drug pushers off To carry out the program, which he promisesd in his State of the

It will use special federal grand juries to gather informa-tion on drug traffickers and pool the intelligence obtained for use by federal, state and local law enforcement agencies. Mr. Ambrose said at a White

His campaign will be directed at the peddlers in major cities, including Washington, and he will have between 150 and 200 lawyers to help him. Mr. Am-brose will be a special assistent attorney general and special consultant to the President on drug abuse law enforcement.

U.S. Rejects Air Force's Bid For New Anti-Bomber Shield

By Michael Getler

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (WP), steadily to about a third of their The Nixon administration has come to the conclusion that spending vast sums of money to rebuild U.S. air defenses for protection against an aging and declining force of Soviet bombers is a losing proposition.

Despite a proposed 1972 increase in overall military spending, a number of high administration officials say privately that a longer-range decision has been made not to invest in an extensive new shield against bomber attack. The Air Force and, to a lesser extent, the Army have been pressing for a buildup of such defenses.

Behind the administration decision are these viewpoints: · Acceptance of the logic expressed in the mid-1960s by former Defense Secretary Robert S. Mc-Namara that it was pointless to defend heavily against Moscow's relatively small fleet of 150 heavy bombers when it was impossible to defend against the thousands of Soviet missiles. • An assessment that the Russians clearly are continuing to concentrate on long-range missiles and missile-carrying submarines—rather than long-range bombers.

The Soviet bomber threat just isn't there," says one top official Another senior defense specialist says that the way the Russians train and the intensity of that training is another telltale indication of the diminished role of their heavy-bomber force. They are doing less training now. picture is shrinking."

The older squadrons of medium bombers are assigned to targets in Europe or China, in the view of these U.S. officials.

Fearing a huge Soviet bomber buildup in the late 1950s, the United States built hundreds of radar installations along the U.S. coasts and across Canada, Thousands of Nike anti-bomber missiles were installed around the country, and the Air Force built up a force of 1,500 interceptor planes. Since the early 1960s, however, those defenses have declined

Brussels Court Rules Heath Is 'Head of State'

BRUSSELS, Jan. 28 (AP).-German-born Marie-Louise Kwiatkowski, who threw printer's ink at British Prime Minister Edward Heath, will remain in iail until she stands trial, a Brussels court ordered today. Miss Kwiatkowski threw the ink at Mr. Heath as he climbed the steps of the Palais d'Egmont last Saturday to sign the treaties linking Britain to the European Economic Community. Court sources said she would probably be tried within a month, given a sentence equal to the time she had already spent in jail and then deported.

Miss Kwiatkowski posed as a photographer under the name of Karen Cooper when she splashed Mr. Heath with ink to protest against a government project for the redevelopment of Covent Garden, She was calm and apparently unconcerned as she heard the public prosecutor charge ber with assaulting a head of state and damaging other people's property. For assaulting a head of state Miss Kwiatkowski can be tried only by a court of assizes. The offense could result in several years of imprisonment.

The prosecutor said Mr. Heath was recognized as a bead of state since he was officially representing Britain.

The defense contended that Queen Elizabeth is Britain's only legitimate head of state and that the ink-throwing incident consequently boils down to assault and battery, a far less serious offense.

The prosecution said Miss Kwiatkowski is being held in jail because she is a foreigner with no official residence in Belgium. She would otherwise be able to leave the country easily and evade prosecution, the prosecution

Rumor He Plans to Quit Soon Is 'Ridiculous,' Connally Says

By David S. Broder WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (WP). The hottest recent rumor on the Texas and Washington political circuit in recent weeks broke into the public yesterday when Democratic National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien told reporters he would "not be at all surprised to see the Nixon administration's top Democrat, Sec-retary of the Treasury John B. Commally, "leave the administra-tion before fall."

Mr. Connally had a one-word comment: "Ridiculous." But close personal and political associates of the former Texas governor did not dismiss the speculation so

Democratic party tressuror Robert Strauss. a Dallas lawyer and political ally of Mr. Com nally's, who was presumably the source of Mr. O'Brien's prediction, said he had not discussed the matter with Mr. Commally. But Mr. Strauss added: "John Connally is not impressed by the titles and emoluments of public office. He came up here, at con-siderable personal sacrifice, to do o job the President asked him to do, and my assumption always has been that as soon as he felt the job was done, he would return to private life."

Weeks or Months Another Texan with close personal and political ties to the sacretary said: "I would bet fairly heavily that Connally won't be around much longer, but whether it's a matter of weeks or months I don't know."

The report that Mr. Connally would be returning to his Hous-ton law firm later this year has been circulating in Texas for several weeks, and has been re-ported by both Jimmy Banks, the editor of the Texas Star Sunday supplement, and by the Houston Chronicle's political gossip column.

Among Mr. Connally's Texas

political associates, the belief is that he wants to get back to the state both to assist his political protegé, Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes, a Democrat, in his race for governor, and to avoid being drawn into partisan warfare in the national election over the economic policies of the Nixon administra-

Mr. Connally has been a vigorous defender of those policies since taking office a year ago and has been designated by Mr. Nixon as the "economic spokesman" for the administratoin.

But the secretary's Texas friends-Democrats themselves it should be soled—believe he would be uncounterable in that role in the election period, when the Democratic nominee assails the edministration for its handling the twin problems and memployment.

Mr. Connally has repeatedly rejected speculation that he might change his party registra-tion or be asked by Mr. Nixon to take second place on the 1972 Republican ticket, telling friends he would go back to Texas after his tour of duty at the Treasury turn to private life began to circulate after Mr. Connally took a year-end vacation at his Texas ranch. Earlier last month, White House officials let it be known the President had taken over from Mr. Connally the responsibility for negotiating the complicated question of dollar devaluation and trade concessions, which the Treasury secretary had been grappling with since the Aug. 15 "new economic policy" declaration.

Nixon Takes Responsibility The rumors about his early re-

Despite this, there has been no evidence of displeasure with Mr. Connally's performance by the White House, and a Treasury official who works with Mr. Con-

Senate Is Asked For Ratification Of Seabed Pact

WASHINGTON; Jan. 28 (AP). -The Nixon administration yesterday asked formal Senate ratification of the treaty banning nuclear weapons from the floor of the world's oceans amid suggestions it does not stop the arms race at sea.

Appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, one Defense Department witness said that while the Joint Chiefs of Staff have no objection to approving the treaty, they view with concern any further steps.

"They reiterate their concern," said Deputy Assistant Secretary Lawrence S. Lagleburger, "that any additional constraints on military use of the seabeds beyond the prohibitions contained in the treaty would bear a potential for grave harm to United States national security

The two other witnesses, John N. Erwin 2d, undersecretary of State, and James F. Leonard, assistant director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, acknowledged the treaty was "limited" but said it should be ratified as a step toward reducing the possibility of the use of the scabed for military gain.

nally said the secretary had given departmental associates no reason to think he is contempleting an early departure.

Nonetheless, Mr. Connally's long-time allies in Texas politics are firm in their belief that he wants to isolate himself from partisan conflict over the administration's economic record, and that he will find it easier to re-tire well in advance of the election than close to voting day.

These same friends say they see no possibility that Mr. Con-nally will enter the Texas Senate race. His old rival inside the Democratic party, ex-Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough, has filed for the party nomination! for the seat now held by Republican Sea. John G. Tower.

The suit said that most of the receiving committees had been created covertly, with opaque or misleading names, to bank the milk money "for the renomination and/or re-election of the in-cumbent President, Richard M.

The suit asked the U.S. District Court here to rescind the milk support increase as motivated for partisan financial gain and therefore "null and void." As a result of the milk price increase, Mr. Nader's formal complaint said, committees to finance the 1972 Nixon campaign were subsequently made $322,500 richer by the contributions of three national dairy marketing cooperatives. Until then, the suit said, the dairy contributions had been going chiefly to influential Democrats, including Senators Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota and Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, both contenders for the presidency this year. Sen, Humphrey was disclosed to have received $15,625 in 1970 and 1971 from the dairymen— $6,200 during last December alone

Greece Blacklisting Books Despite End of Censorship

By Henry Kamm

ATHENS, Jan. 28 (NYT).—The Greek government, which officially ended censorship in 1970, is quietly putting bookstores on guard against the sale of books that its National Security Directorate has listed as "Communist and anti-government."

policemen have been calling on stores throughout the country to show owners the shr-page list and suggesting that they refrain from ordering the books or, if they have them in stock, from

Since the end of last year,

First Deputy Premier Stylianos Pattekos and Byron Stameto-poulos, the chief government spokesman, denied in interviews that there was such a list. "No such list exists," Mr. Puttakos

"It would be stupid," Mr. Sta-matopoulos said, "Just look at Athens, even Brecht is playing at the theater."

A downtown theater is per-forming the German playwright's "The Good Woman of Szechwan," but the printed text is No. 76 on the Security Directorate's list of 124 books. A photostatic copy of the list, dated Oct. 25, 1971, and bearing the file number G.A. 2732/235530, is in the possession of The New York Times.

Effective in Provinces The contradiction illustrates, in the view of Greek intellectuals, in the erratic nature of the govern-ment's attempts to regulate intel-lectual life while maintaining a legal framework of freedom of nonpolitical expression. The effect of the blacklist of books, which poblishing circles regard as being meant to intimi-date, has so far been small in Athens but more marked in the provinces. The amount of passive resistance to the anthoritarian rule of Premier George Papadopoulos is even smaller outside the capital than it is

George Rhallis, a former interior minister and a conservative, said in an interview that his book "The Truth About Greek Politicians," which appears on the list, had sold 3,000 copies in Athens and only two in Patras, the fourth-largest city in Greece. The lifting of censorship turned the windows of the many bookshops of Athens into displays of dissidence. Despite the blacklist, Greek translations of the writings of Che Guevara, Mao Tse-tung, Brecht, Lenin, Trotsky and other foreign Communists continue to be displayed far more widely than their potential readership in this anti-Communist country warrants.

Because the ban on any spoken or printed word against the gov-ernment remains in effect, such displays are considered here the only permissible way of expressing a political attitude that dif-fers from the official doctrines. The blacklist is viewed as a first move against this silent discent.

Some Greeks Pleased The list has delighted those people who accuse the government of a lack of intellectual sophistication.

Among their favorite items is the proscription of the stories of Chekhov, whose works are said to constitute "intentional advertising of Russian literature." The same charge is leveled against a biography of Dos-toevsky written by Henri Troyat of the French Academy.

The "History of the Russian Revolution," by Trotsky, is con-demned for "Trotskyist content." Lenin's "State and Revolution" is cited for "Communist content." "Trotskyism" is also ascribed to Norman Mailer's "The Armies of

'Preliminary Commentary'

The criticism of President Nixon's peace plan by the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong at the Paris talks was barbed and negative. The outlines of the stalemate were sharpened. American insistence on some form of referendum to be agreed upon before complete withdrawal of troops clashed with the other side's demand for unconditional withdrawal by a fixed date, plus, in effect, the prior overturn of the Thieu government. But there were some faint rays of hope still: Hanoi and its ally did not reject the American proposal outright, and the North Vietnamese delegate said publicly that his side had presented "a preliminary commentary" and would study the project further.

While this mood continues, it is possible to hold to the thought that some formula can yet be achieved which will provide a political, rather than wholly military, end to the conflict. The North Vietnamese are skeptical of American good faith-an attitude which is reciprocated.

Hanoi questions the possibility of holding a free election under the eyes of the Salgon police apparatus. There is an equally strenuous questioning in Saigon of the possibility of holding free elections under the secret survelliance of the Viet Cong's terrorist apparatus. Whatever commissions, domestic or international, may undertake the task of supervising elections would be confronted with the problem of mediating between a political grouping that believes itself entitled to maintain the status quo by force and one dedicated to the overthrow of the same status by similar means.

But such an effort would be better, for all concerned, than a continuation of the present situation, in which open force is openly opposed by open force, with no real consideration of what either force represents in terms of popular support and the eventual good of Vietnam.

It is often said that Hanoi felt itself cheated out of the military victory it won against the French by the diplomatic "solution" at Geneva. But the Vietnamese people, too, North and South, as well as their neighbors in Cambodia and Laos, have been cheated as well-cheated out of peace, and the opportunity to build states with some consideration of their own will rather than by guns and bombs.

There is a chance to do that now_s slim chance, perhaps, considering the bitternesses of many years of war, and assorted crimes and errors committed against the peoples of Indochina by foreigners sa well as their own leaders. But it is a chance worth serious consideration, and the leadership in Hanoi should give it the further study it promises.

South Asian Reality

come notice that the administration will try to straighten out the mess it has made of policy toward the nations of the Indian subcontinent. A first etep toward the "realistic relations" Mr. Rogers defines as the United States goal ought to be early recognition of the new state of Bangladesh.

It is beyond dispute that Sheik Mujibur Rahman has established a going government in Dacca. The surrender of guerrilla arms throughout the country, the rapid return of millions of refugees from India and the gradoal withdrawal of Indian troops all testify to the popularity and effectiveness of the new Bengali regime.

It is also clear that there is no hope of any lingering Bengali political ties with Pakistan, however desirable some form of continuing association might have been. The Bengall insistence on full independence is Soviet recognition of Bangladesh undonbtedly will spur similar action by other nations. This is especially true since Pakistan's new prime minister, Zulfikar Alt Bhutto, has prudently refrained from breaking relations with Moscow as he had done with some smaller nations that preceded it in recognizing the Dacca regime.

Prompt United States recognition of the new South Asian reality will not hurt Washington's relations with the pragmatic Mr. Bhutto. Such action could help restore confidence in the United States among millions of Indians and Bengalis who have been bitterly disappointed by this country's failure to support principles of democracy and decency on the subcontinent.

This is no longer purely an internal affair, not only because of Yugoslavia's key posttion on the political and geographical map of Europe, but also because of the activities of the militant emigres and the number of Yogoslav workers abroad, who provide a potential hunting ground, not to mention the danger to international means of trans-

But calmer policies are now emerging, and it would be a great pity if they were to be abandoned or interrupted because of the real or alleged activities of terrorists.

Nixon's Vietnam Efforts

The completely disproportionate attention, in both the foreign and domestic policy spheres, which was directed at Southeast Asia in recent years has fortunately been reduced to a reasonable level by Nixon. Today's concern is more for the real problems of the United States itself. Seen from that angle, a continued stalemate in Vietnam might be bearable. The home front is now more or less stable on the Vletnam issue, hut the deeper causes of the "American malaise" have by no means been eliminated. For this reason an acceptable negotiated settlement in Vietnam would certainly be desirable. But for the present it seems unattainable—although in the light of past experience the possibility certainly remains open. Why should anyone assume that Nixon'e latest surprise announcement will be his fast?

-From Neue Zuercher Zeitung (Zurich).

After China, Vietnam. President Nixon. once again, has surprised the world by announcing that, thanks to secret diplomacy, he bas overturned the known element of the Vietnam conflict... Once again it was secret diplomacy that decided everything. And once again, the keyman in that victory is Henry Kissinger. . . . "The enemy is trying once again to win a military victory," Nixon said. This is why he judged it necessary to inform the American people. But above all, the U.S. President's goal appears to be to drive Hanoi into a corner and to obtain from North Vietnam the response he has been value awaiting for three months. . . . But while moking a step forward, the President does not go all the way since, for the time being, he still maintains his support of the South Vietnamese government, which, according to him, should participate actively in the negotiations with Hanoi and the NLF. This is precisely what the latter do not want. . . . Richard Nixon is thus trying a double explanatory operation, ten months before the U.S. presidential elections and a few weeks before his visit to Peking. For the Americans, he draws a balance-sheet, explains to them that he has done his utmost to obtain the release of some 480 POWs held in North Vietnam. For world public opinion, he attemps to throw to Hand the responsibility for continuation of the war.

-From France-Soir (Paris).

Dangers in U.S. Budget

A few months ago already, Mr. Nixon said "I am a Keynesian," at a time when Keynes' star was beginning to wane. What Mr. Nixon wanted to express, and what his draft budget confirms, is that the priority objective of his economic policies is from now on to reduce unemployment. It remains to be seen whether, under present circumstances, the chosen method is best fitted to obtain the intended results. Early last year, Nr. Nixon counted on a budget deficit of circa $11 billion for fiscal year 1971-1972; the $39billion mark (in deficit) has already been reached. Isn't the existence of such a big deficit for the current fiscal year and the announcement of another considerable deficit for next year rather likely to jeopardize the policy of flexible controls on prices and wages initiated last Nov. 15? Another risk is that the dollar outside the United . States may be ruined for good and that, consequently, unforeseeable developments of the monetary crisis may occur.

> The rate of increase determines the doubling time. If something grows 7 percent a year, it will double in ten years. Right now world population is growing 2.1 percent a year; at that rate it doubles in 33 years. And with each doubling the base is of course larger for the next increase. The world had about three and a half billion people in it in 1970. At the present rate of increase, it will have seven main strains of planetary life.

Exponential growth is a tricky affair. It gives us the illusion for a long time that things are going slowly; then suddenly it speeds up. Suppose the demand for some raw material is two tons this year and doubles every year. Over the next 15 years it will rise to only 83,768 tons, but just 5 years later it will be 1,048,576 tons. That phenomenon is what makes it so hard for people to understand how rapidly we may be approaching the limits of growth. For as run out by the year 2000. If serious,

An Example

Consider the case of aluminum as a sample of resource demand and supply. The known reserves of aluminum are enough to supply the current demand for 100 years. But the use is increasing exponentially, and at the rate of increase the supply will be enough for only 31 years. Moreover, the multiplying demand is a much larger factor, mathematically, than any likely discovery of new sources of supply. If re-serves were multiplied by five, the same growth of demand would still exhaust them in 55 not especially chosen to disturb, for there are others that even more dramatically indicate the way exponential growth can run up to projected limits. One is simply arable land. At the present rate of world population growth, the supply of land nec-agricultural productivity were doubled, the limit would be pushed back 30 years. Those estimates are taken from drafts of what is likely to be one of the most important documents of our age. It is a report made for the Club of Rome, an eminent international group of industrialists, economists, scientists and others. Entitled "The Limits of Growth," it was done by scientists using world system models developed in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It will he published in March by Potomac Associates of Washington.

The report's authors would never insist on any particular figure. They know that they are dealing with variables, and they have indeed leaned way over backward to make optimistic as-sumptions in their proections.

But every model they build assuming continuation of the present world philosophy of growth ends in collapse. To ignore that tendency, to pretend that growth can go on forever, is like arguing that the earth is flat.

· At the same time, Nixon is demanding that the enemy give up the positions it has gained years of fighting in South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, and eccept a cease-fire just at the time when the enemy is mounting an offensive and U.S. ground troops are withdrawing.

It is clear that Washington is not going to abandon Salgon under what amounts to a demand for Saigon's surrender, and that Hanoi and the NLF are not going to order a cease-fire and abandon military positions they have won in the last 10 years at the cost of millions of lives. So the stalemate continues.

Thus the outlook is not for less fighting but for a more savage battle during the coming dry season, and while Nixon has doubtedly gained politically in the short run, he has now committed himself to a course of action and a set of unacceptable peace terms which have revived the Victnam campaign, which still has over nine months to go. For his peace formula is a little like the old insurance policies, "the big type giveth but the small type taketh away."

During the long and sharp debate that lies ahead the President, if he sticks to his present peace terms and war aims, will be asking the American people to continue fighting, not only for the release of the American prisoners of war—which nobody opposes-but for the maintenance of his ally in Saigon, for the neutralization of all of Indochina, and for democracy in a country where the word has little mean-

Here in Florida, his complicated peace terms will be a good political issue at least until the primary voting on March 14, but thereafter, when his military and political terms are finally analysed and widely understood, they may well be seen not as a means to peace, but as a cause for continuing the war. # Some Notes On Winter In Moscow

By Robert G. Kaiser

MOSCOW.—The sun barely rises out of the horizon during a Moscow winter; even at noon it hangs low in the southern sky. casting a yellow light and loug shadows. Though the sun is out, the air can be filled with what looks like fine snow, but is really nature's thermometer-"a real Moscow frost," as the natives call it.

The sky is blotted with great clouds of steam from the chimnevs of factories and power stations. In the evening rush hour Moscow's trolley cars ply their routes with golden, frosted windows: you can't see in or out. The Moscow River, which flows briskly through the city in warmer weather, is frozen to a dead halt, as if stopped in its tracks by the sight of a ghost.

It isn't always a pretty season. During much of January the same covering of snow got grayer and grimler, waiting for a new coating of white. But the thinnest layer of snow under the white birches around the capital is proof enough that it is a real oscow winter.

This weather brings out a practical bent in the Russian character. This is a nation of sensible dressers, none of whom have to be reminded to put on a hat before going outside. The crowds on the streets, especially the ladies making their exhausting rounds of the shops and kiosks, are wrapped and covered like so many winterized mummies. The basic wardrobe includes a wool scarf, a heavy cost (preferably with fur collar) and stout boots. Many women still wear the old-fashioned felt boots which have warmed Russian feet for centuries. Men have a similar outfit, almost always complement-ed by a fur hat.

Keep Your Coat

Entering a restaurant or a theater, one is required to remove the whole panoply of protective coverings and leave them with a cloakroom attendant. Movie theaters, though, have no cloakrooms, and the audience watches in their coats. The managment cooperates by letting the temperature fall into the 50s. Why this inconsistency between regular theaters and the movies? Because there are so many shows a day, it would be too complicated to take and give back all the coats," a Muscovite ex-

Preparations for winter can be extensive. Cracks around windows and doors are plugged with cottou and covered with tape. A practical housewife will dry and pickle mushrooms, cucumbers, tomatoes and eggplant to prepare for a long season with few vegetables. Ægyptian tomators are currently on sale in Moscow for about $1.50 a pound.) It's normal to prepare sauerkraut in barrels, using cabbage, carro's and apples. If well made and stored in a cool place, it can last for three months. A lesser breed might shrink from this kind of winter, but the Russians seem to love it. Parents and grandparents take children for walks as though it was helmy spring. The basic Russian child in this season is a small bundle of wool, from which protrude lively eyes and two bright red

Temperatures below zero don't discourage the city's many skiers and skaters, who are out in force every weekend. Several of Mos-cow's excellent parks flood miles of pathways for sketing. Crosscountry skis and iceskates can be inexpensively rented.

They are at least temporarily, "deficit items"-the Russian term for something people would like to buy, but can't find Tea kettles plain and electric. are another deficit item this winter. There are hundreds more in an economy in which consumer demand sometimes has a slow and ponderous effect on production, and sometimes has no effect at all.

Consumerism

Last year's Communist party congress promised more and better consumer goods, and at least the Soviet press has been taking the promise eeriously in numerous articles this month.

The article exposes factories which perform hadly, and urges hetter work. Prayds printed a reader's letter which pointed out that "the wholesale shoe warehouse in Khabarovsk (in the Far East) was full of footwear that was not in demand-two million rubles' worth." Why? The reader said the shoes were of "poor quality outdated patterns and models and unattractive appear-

An Exciting 'French Connection'

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss DARIS, Jan. 28 (IHT).—About 10 years ago a French TV entertainer (Jacques Angelvin) smuggled about 24 pounds of heroin into the United States in an automobile. He worked for an international narcotics organization, and, after a sensational police hunt, was sentenced to three to six years in jail.

His case and those of several of his associates, some of whom are still at large, have been taken from the police files as the material for "The French Connection" (at the Balzac, the Triomphe and the Arlequin in English) which has been the reigning favorite at American box offices this winter.

Director William Friedkin has staged the film expertly in a semi-documentary manner and be moves its scandals at a breathless pace. Fact and fiction have been combined to produce an exciting melodrama.

Authenticity

Its climax is certainly invention but the feverish tempo of Manhattan has been captured elsewhere with such authenticity that even this extravagant episode fits persuasively into the general picture.

The acting is consistently convincing, always a sign of the firm control of a director. Gene Hackman bursts forth with a riveting account of the dedicated but scarcely endearing detective. He is tough, crude, courageous and something of a monomaniac as he desperately tries to crack the drug traffic—from the meetings of its merchants in luxurious hotel suites to the sale of snow and grass in sordid black bars, Fernando Rey of the Spanish cinema is ideal as the suave European, the brain of the gang, posing as a smart gentle-man, while Marcel Bozzuffi as the hired assassin succeeds in conveying the paranoid nature of this sinister figure with the sickly smile with which he receives orders and executes them,

William Friedkin is responsible for the celluloid edi-tion of Mart Crowley's "The Boys in the Band" (at the Monte-Carlo and at the Studio Alpha in English), a hit of the New York and London theater a few seasons ago.

Crowley has written the adaptation himself, adding a few introductory scenes but otherwise leaving the text unchanged. Friedkin has placed it before the comerce and photobefore the cameras and photographed it with the competent stage company. The result is an honest job of screen trans-cription and the bright dialogue and commendable qualities of the original have been preserved. have been inspired by B-grade war films of Hollywood.

It concerns, a Manhattan homosexual who invites intimates to his apariment to celebrate the birthday of his friendliest enemy. The gay party, fun at first, takes on a sober complexion when the host's college friend, a square of squares, arrives unexpectedly. A grim truth game is started and its revelations lead to doleful soul-searching. As in the play, the comic interludes are superior to the near-tragic ones; the dramatic moments of the final half strain for dramatic urgency. There are several compelling performances: that of Leonard Frey as the pock-marked hirthday guest, that of Kenneth Nelson as the vindictive bost, that of Cliff Gorman as the flighty queen, that of Laurence Luckinbill and Keith Prentice as the old couple and that of Robert La Tourneaux as the wide-eyed hustler, a midnight cowboy. There are three Chinese movies in Paris this week. At the Studio Saint-Severin two products of the People's Republic of China are alternating on a day-to-day basis. The first is

"Le Goerre des Souterrains," newsreel-like reconstruction of the peasants' underground army against a Japanese offensive in the province of Hopei in 1942.
By a strict following of a thought of Mao Tse-tung the farming masses are organized to attain a strength that defeats the invaders. The film itself is of primitive cinematographic nature. The beginning sets the scene effectively and quite vividly, but the direction and acting of the rest of it seems to Mahalia Jackson

The second is 'Le Détachement Feminin Rouge," seen at the Venice festival last summer. It is pictorially a handsome film, a series of ballet tobleaux depicting the victory of a revolutionary women's brigade -benefiting from sage political and military counsel-over local tyranny in 1927. It has been photographed in flaming color and there is an inordinate amount of flag-waving. It is danced by the Feking Opera company with considerable spirit, but its choreography and its presentation are sternly academic.

"Les Felons d'An-Tchai" (at the Git-Le-Cœur) is from Hong Kong, a very fair sample of the sort of swashbuckling, Technicolored screen epics that now flood the cinemas of Soutbeast Asia where audiences show an insatiable appetite for them. Of fantastic cape-and-sword cut, it is set in Shantung in 1916 and tells bow a valiant knight defeats a horde of bandits, disguised as show folk, when they invado a peaceful village.

Romain Gary, the author, taking a second shot at movie direc-tion (his first: "Les Oiseaux Vont Mourir au Pérou", delivers himself of an exceptionally violent and lurid melodrama in "Kill!" at the Mercury in English).

"The Pakistanian Connection" might have been a more exact title as it suggests the Friedkin film in an Eastern setting. Mr. Gary, employing a narcotics bureau detective as his mouthpiece, proposes a means of halting the worldwide drug traffic: Shoot or knife—all its overlords.

French Consul

Gary, while French consul in Los Angeles, studied movie-making and sold many of his books for films. He was so dissatisfied with the results that be decided to write and direct motion pictures himself. He has learned the craft, but not the art. He is—in this second film—quite as able a director as most of his professional rivals but he appears to imitate their routine approach instead of striking out into new territory, "Kill!"—with Jean Seberg as its harassed heroine, the wife of a doubledealing agent (James Mason)—is OK in its way. It contains lots of chases and enough surprises, but certainly a writer of such experience and intelligence as Gary could and should bring to the screen something a bit more original. This tale of cheating investigators and sudden murders is early Hitchcock belatedly

It is of exceptional interest, not only because it brings to the Continent an art that one has few occasions to see this side of the Channel, but also because it assembles works from a variety of sources public and private collections in England, France, Switzerland, the United States, Australia, etc.—that one could not hope to see under other circumstances. Sixty artists are represented by over 340 works, and their interest is most varied.

The Star

Turner is unquestionably the star of the show and is repre-sented by over 50 oils and watercolors next to which much of the production of our own contemporaries appears downright retrograde. His view of the world about him is utterly personal and yet free from any striving after originality. Turner is first of all preoccupied with movement and with light. In his earlier, more precisely representational paintings one sees how he infusee a seascape with movement. The swell in the foreground seems perpetually on the point of lurching away, in constant movement because the viewer's eye is led

DARIS, Jan 28 (IHT).—Open- through a flux of rhythms that it can never entirely fix. In France, much is made of the movement one is supposed to find in the work of Delacroix, Turner's younger contemporary—but this is an intellectual premise. One feels Delacroix striving after movement, but what he achieves is no more than a mental pattern of movement, a movement embalmed. Turner on the other hand is not static-except when he deals with human figures, with which he seems to be ill at ease. One of his most famous paintings-"Rain, Steam and Speed." which is on display here—is a synthesis of his essential preoccupations. It shows a train roaring over a bridge in a hozy golden landscape. (The actual railway line which impressed Turner in 1844 advertised speeds of 100 miles an hour and not, as we might amugly suppose today, 25 miles an hour.) The painting is barely defined, an abstraction both of movement and of light. As certain critics have pointed out, the sights of nature which are a combination of varied light and color must be interpreted on canvas by the sole use of color. The painter must therefore make a compromise and establish a pattern of relationships which is a transposition of both. Constable, Turner'e contemporary who is also well represented at the Petit Palais, was especially concerned with suggesting the true colors of landscape and rejected the more subdued scale and dominant brown of his forebears.

London Art Galleries

Turner's "Campo Santo, Venice" from the Toledo (Ohio) Museum of Art.

Turner, on the other hand, with a more dynamic view, was not so much interested in the somewhat static inventory of colors as he was in the dynamics of light which, in a sense, he also treated as movement. The landscape in "Rain, Steam and Speed" is composed of impalpable forms and unreal hues which do nonetheless succeed in expressing the dynamic impact of a landscape.

Daring

One sometimes gets the impression that he goes too far in dif-fuseness, that the pallor and lack of form within such or such a canvas fails to achieve what he would have wished to do, because the delicate balance is no longer there. One cannot help admiring his daring nonetheless—a daring born not out of provocation but out of an intimate conviction. Somehow remote and isolated in his outlook, Turner produced a quasi-pantheistic form of lyrical delectation. His world is one in which beings commune through the splendor of the spectacle without ever encountering one

The major English portraitists of the period are also well represented. Reynolds and Gainsborough (the latter showing a mild Rousseavish sentimentality). Raeburn and Lawrence, Loutherbourg, working in the line of the French tradition, represents the romantic fascination with the force of nature (e.g. his painting of 'The Palls on the Rhine at

The Swiss-born Fuseli spent all his productive years in England and is represented by a number of hyper-theatrical works of which the most successful, to my mind. is the "Nightmare" (a young woman lying in convulsive prostration, an imp squatting oppressively on her breast while a glowing phantom horse thrusts its threatening head in through the curtains), Fuseli represents one of the major trends of the ro-mantic movement which took an interest in dreams and psychological forces. He is least successful when he tries to handle these objectively (as in his 'Lady Macbeth"), but when his theme is not literary he appears to anticipate many aspects of surrealism.

William Blake is represented by a dozen characteristically stiff, rhetorical and "sublime" workshe is an essential figure of the period. John Martin is worth mentioning if only because he epitomizes a rather facile romanticism, literary, cataclysmic—sometimes breathtaking—and oc-casionally impossibly kitschy.

Waxworks

The two-dimensional warworks of the pre-Raphaelites, their total, absurd immobility, their maniacal concern with minutia, deeply neurotic preaching and pervasive alliance of guilt underhanded sensuality with make them weird and horrible examples of ugliness and sham. Not that Rossetti, Millais, Burn-Jones or William Holman Hunt were intentional frands. They believed in Truth and Goodness and Purity and Repression and their art is practically cataleptic because of this. But you could not totally subscribe to Victorian virtue and its sentimental view of "goodness" and remain in your right mind. And so, as they wave about the forbidden fruit as a Horrible Warning they are not displeased to lick at the juice that trickles down their wrist.

The great variety of artists and their number makes it impossible to do justice to all those who are of interest. Alexander Cozens is worth more than a passing reference for the sake of a graphic style that is free and dynamic. And there are many others one enjoys discovering for one rea-sen or another in this panorams of over a century of English painting.

Riddle of Chinese Snuff Bottles

By Souren Melikian

ONDON, Jan. 28 (DRT) .- "When it (tobacco) Larrives at the capital it is made into snuff, which, it is said, can clear the eyes, even more, it has the property of banishing infection. Glass bottles of all and every shape and color are made to contain it... There is an ivory spoon which is returned to the flask after sniffing. They are all manufactured by the Imperial Palace. Imitations are made by the common people but they never attain the standard of the original."

Such were the words of Wang Shih-chen, writing in 1705 about must. From the beginning, shuff thaplred art in the shape of bottles and with that art came faking China's oldest industry. Of all the riddles about dates and artists with which the Chinese have presented collectors, the smiff-bottle riddle is the most difficult. Hugh M. Moss's latest book, "Smull Bottles of China," from which Wang's quotation is taken, might well have been called "The Snuif Bottle Mystery."

Leafing through the catalogue for next Monday's sale of snuff bottles at Christie's, one is struck by the scarcity of dates for the 252 lots described. In many cases, there is no mention of any period at all. This generally means that the writer of the catalogue considers the piece of recent make. this particular case, however, I have no doubt that the absence of a date often reflects uncertainty.

Example

A typical example is Lot 252, a "seed pod bottle of disc shape." A catalogue note says, "For another example of this type see 'Snuff Bottles of China' by Hugh M. Moss, p. 97." On page 97 is a charming eggplant-shaped bottle, dated by Mr. Moss to "1820-1900." Broad as this dating is, it apparently struck the writer of the Christie's catalogue as exaggeratedly precise, too precise to tag Lot 252 with the same dates. In several other cases the presence of a reign-mark is mentioned. For example, Lot 213 is described as "marked on the base with a four-character Yung Cheng mark in underglase blue"-but the period is not stated, which means that the expert is not sure that the object was actually made at the time suggested by the reign-mark.

The writer of Christie's catalogue often refers his readers to Mr. Mose's book for comparison, an oblique way of saying that he does not want to commit himself but that there does exist a certain amount of information and documentation-end that it is up to the collector to make up his own

In any other category, such imprecision would be enough to kill the market. The paradoxical fact is that the soulf-bottle market is doing better and better every year. The average price range is $80 to $900 at a sale devoted to snuff bottles. Apparently the appeal of the carefully carved bottles of glass, jasper, Canton enamel or even lapis lazuli is strong enough to induce the average buyer to to $300 range is that of bottles loosely described and sold without guarantees of period and workman-

Those few bottles which can be pinpointed to a given period—and even ascribed to known artists often rice far above these limits. One June 14, 1971, when one of the finest sales of snuff bottles ever held anywhere took place at Christie's, a rockcrystal bottle with a landscape painted inside by Chou Lo-ylian fetched the staggering price of 420 guiness (roughly $1,058 at the time). For an object measuring 2 8/4 inches, dated 1886, this is a fantastic sum. But this case is far from being isolated. In the same sale, Lot 46, a so-called inside painted "hair crystal" bottle dated 1916 and signed by Yeh Shun-san, 2 1/8 inches high, made 360

It must be emphasized that these two bottles were painted in the most academic and even repetitive style of traditional Chinese art. They do not represent any avant-garde school—in which case these high prices would be more understandable. Obviously, the snuff bottle has become a collector's item—the kind of object, small, bright and neat, pleasant to handle and easy to understand at first sight and which has an immediate attraction for all those who did not have enough lead soldiers to play with in early childhood.

As a market category, the snuff bottle owes its position to one dealer, Hugh M. Moss. (IHT, Nov. 6, 1971). Son of Sidney Moss, one of London's leading dealers in top-quality Chinese art, Rugh Moss selected the one neglected field in Chinese art where objects were available in large quantities and launched an art magazine with the simple title of Chinese Snuff Bottles. His latest work is "Snuff Bottles of China," With a dealer's practical mind, he conceived this book as a sort of oversized sales catalogue with every one of the 499 items illustrated in color and at actual size, accompanied by captions giving the known facts in the terse style of a sales catalogue. At the beginning, he summarizes his main discoveries: the identification of several late 19th-century artists-those whose works are fetching some of the highest prices at auctions.
As a result of his research, Mr. Moss has achieved prominence in his field that few dealers can boast and controls the market to a large extent, At Christie's sale of June 14, 1971, the two Mosses, father and son, bought 102 lots of the 196 which were sold. Whether these were bought on com-mission for collectors (a time-honored custom in London) or for stock matters little.

The situation will probably change rapidly as the number of collectors grows and as more dealers become interested in the field. One of the fascingtions of this class of objet d'art is that many more discoveries identifications of artists, attributions of unknown works to the right man, etc.-will obviously be made in the future. And many of these will be made by collectors at sales such as

John Leavey, with sober: oils leaning toward a calm realism, and Jessica Dvorak, playfully translating nature into tactile surfaces aiming at the rediscovery of materials and the material world, represent two major directions in American art today.

Leavey's muted landscapes and portraits of modern people in oldfashioned ovals owe something to Edwin Dickinson's intricate and mystical traditionelism. The landscapes and details, from quiet

Mary Billingsley, by contrast, is an abstract painter although she uses landscapes, too, to start ber acrylic and collage compositions in vivid colors and jagged, interlocking shapes.

Robin Bagier's boxes are the most fun. The boxes house Victorian and art nouveau gimeracks from attics, flea markets and antique fairs. Buttons, bones, angels' beads and dolls' eyes have scapes and details, from quiet been resurrected, polished and villages, under cloudy skies, in finished with an artisan's care and put together again in juxtapositions in clock cases.

But back to Dvorak: Her funny little mushroom excrescences are assembled in boxes or bulge from boards and are made from multi-colored velvets. The budlike forms and tendrils are as cumping and pudgy as Dirney animals, but they teem with sexual allusions. Like Arla Patch, she is feminine in the best sense of the word; instead of bothering with cold, abstract problems, she has found an instinctive sensual expression. Her "Mendecino Fog." her "Road to the Beach," her "Roman Street Scene" are beguiling as are her "Traveling Cloak" and other oils.

Searing Experience—'Alpha Beta' By John Walker LONDON, Jan. 28 (IHT).-E. A. ... Whitehead's "Alpha Beta" at the Royal Court Theatre is less and Miss Roberts. a play than a searing emotional experience, one that inspires its two protagonists, Albert Finney and Rachel Roberts, as an embattled husband and wife, to rawedged, powerful performances. The hostilities go on for nine years and nothing much changes, except that each partner becomes increasingly defeated, unable to do anything but try to destroy the other. Both are trapped by the rigid standards of the society they inhabit, that no man's land between the working and the middle classes. We eavesdrop on the moment he first asks her for a separation: the time four years later when each lives his separate life in the same house—he has affairs, she scratches his car in retaliation-remaining together for the sake of the children; and later, after a separation, when he grows sentimental over the children he sees once a week, while she refuses implacably to divorce him and threatens spicide in an attempt to bring him back.

Each act begins in the same quiet way, gradually working up to a yelling cresoendo of recrimination and abuse, shocking attempts at destruction that bare the quivering nerves of relationships, that are painful because of their truth and because of the truth of the acting of Mr. Finney They are partners not only in a loveless marriage but in their adherence to the dead standards they have inherited. He claims that working-class morality is "rigid and depraving" and so, for them, it is. He wants freedom but can only imagine it in fantssy terms, of having a thousand women. He tries to make that a reality, drifting from affair to affair, seeking reistionships and achieving destruction.

She, who was old enough to know the difference between a wedding and a marriage, grows unyielding in her attitudes, following "the law, the moral law," which she regards as so selfevident that she does not bother to define it. At the end, she moves into total irrationality, re-fusing to set her husband free and yet encouraging him to kill himself as the best solution to their predicament.

Mr. Whitehead writes with considerable wit as well as power, forcing laughter by the accuracy of his observation at the way human beings lacerate each other. Anthony Page directs with painstaking care and exactitude.

Inter-Action's the Almost Free Theatre has been equipped with a young German playwright Peter Handke's "Offending the Au-dience," a dazzling attack on conventional theater and its concerns.

The success of the evening, which will stimulate and fascinate anyone interested in the purpose of drama, owes much to the direction of Naftali Yavin and his actors from The Other Company-Jane Bond, Judy Monahan, Andrew Norton, and Robert Walker-since Mr. Handke's original text contains no stage directions nor any indication of how the lines are to be distributed among

They add to the paradoxical nature of staging a piece of antitheater by continually contradicting words with actions. Both plays feature sensitive acting by Paola Dionisotti as a conventional girl who longs to be more daring. Jim Hiley directs.

Now that David Mercer, author of the brilliant "After Haggerty," is established as one of Britain's bect playwrights, the Hampstead Theatre Club has kindly revived his first play, "Ride a Cock Horse," tracing the decline of an agregant novelist through his relationship with three women. The least satisfactory of his plays, it is worth a visit for the flashes of wit and incight, for John Hurt's performance as a writer on his way back to the womb, and for Angela Richards as Fanny, the only character not motivated by self-pity. Brian Murray's direction is occasionally defeated by the cramped Hampstead stage.

Exports Up 9% in '71; Imports Increase 10%

WIESBADEN, West Germany, Jan 28 (Reuters) - West Germany's trade surplus rose slightly to 15.9 billion deutsche marks last year from 15.7 billion DM in 1970. the Federal Statistics Office said

Exports over the year increased by about 9 percent to 136 billion DM, while imports rose 10 per-cent to 1291 billion.

The office said that in real terms imports rose about 11 percent, reflecting lower average prices for imported goods over the year, while exports at constant 1962 prices increased by about 7 percent.

The office said that the trade surplus rose to 1.87 billion DM in December from 934 million in November, but was lower than the 2.7 billion level of December, Imports in December increased 4 percent, about 430 million DM, to 10.55 billion, compared with November and were 7 percent, or 565 million DM, higher than in December, 1970.

Exports rose by 12 percent, or about 137 billion DM, to 12.42 billion DM in December compared with the previous month, but were about 1 percent, or 167 mil-lion DM, lower than in December,

The office said that taking these figures together with those for invisibles, prelminary federal bank figures show that West Germany ran a current account balance of payments surplus of 500 million DM last year, against a 2.5 billion DM surplus in 1970.

Slight Rise in Werner Appeals for Action Trade Surplus On EEC Monetary Pooling

By Andrew Leigh

(IRT).-A call to tackle the problem of a Common Market monetary union was made today by Pierre Werner, president of Luxembourg. Speaking at the second European Management Symposium, he revealed that the REC Commission wants to go ahead with a European coopera-tion plan which would include some pooling of monetary matters. However, he denied that the EEC and monetary union leads definitely to a unified Europe. This was an over-simplification and still missing was the basic need of assured convertibility of currencies, he said.

Whatever the outcome of the struggle for monetary unification, Mr. Werner is convinced that EEC economic integration has progressed "too far for us to turn hack now." He added that our consumers' world needs the dynamism of international trade which in turn presupposes a smooth functioning of a stable payments system. Finally he suggested that "it's up to Europe to play its proper role."

Dollar Stable Despite Steep Rise in Gold

LONDON, Jan. 28 (AP-DJ) -A sharp rise in gold prices today failed to disturb interbank dealings for the dollar, foreign exchange dealers in several Euro-pean centers said.

Although the price of gold is sometimes considered as a barom-eter of confidence in the dollar, the dollar gained against Swiss francs, deutsche marks and lire. It recorded a small decline against sterling; Belgian and French francs, guilders and yen.

The price of gold rose very sharply, bullion dealers said, because the market was so thin that even small speculative buy orders could influence the price. At one point in Zurich, the price. touched $48 an ounce, but closed at $47.30-50; a gain of 80 cents. The London afternoon fixing was at $47.35, up 75 cents from yesterday. Both the London and high since the two-tier market was established in March 1968. European bankers generally commented that President Nixon's economic message yesterday cast doubt on how the international monetary system would be organized in the future. He implied that the dollar wouldn't become convertible into other monetary assets for at least two years. Some analysts expressed concern that if the downtrend in the dollar continues, central banks might be reluctant to make support purchases of inconvertible dollars at the bottom limits es-rency realignment. Though the dollar remained relatively stable today, it recorded a net decline on the week. The weakness was generally ascribed to further reductions in domestic U.S. interest rates, which makes it relatively more attractive to hold European cur-

He suggested that "most Eu-ropean firms are suffering from an inferiority complex about size" and cited three factors which are inhibiting the growth of the

The three factors were monopoly and anti-trust laws, increesed legislation in developing coun-tries against foreign-dominated investment, and finally sheer size leading to difficulties in motivation of people, controlling the organization and the ability fo innovate effectively.

But, added the professor, "the problems of the transmittonal giants are the opportunities of the medium-sized firms typical of the European establishment." He could not have had a better message for the 400 top European managers listening to him and they lapped it up.

The audience of business managers has been bombarded with techniques and strategies all this week to help them in thinking about an enlarged EEC. They have also been confronted with several completely different methods of aiding managerial decision-making each of which is complex and, of course, costly to adopt. As one cynical manager put it:
"If we used all these systems we'd either be super-efficient or just plain broke."

Juggling With the Budget Deficit

Economic Analysis

NEW YORK, Jan. 27 (Reuters).—First Boston Corp. economist Albert Wojnilower believes that the federal government could have reported a budget deficit for fiscal 1972 of "only" $28.8 billion rather than the $38.8 billion projected this week by President Nixon.

An analysis of the budget, Mr. Wojnilower says, shows that the government is planning to speed up payments that normally would have been made after July 31, and thus fall in riscal 1973, to the January-June 1972 period.

"As a result of this immediate bulge in spending (in fiscal 1972), the increase in spending for the next fiscal year is held to less than $10 bil-lion," he says. "By this ploy, the government appears to have succeeded in getting the press to highlight the smallness of the expenditure rise and to attribute the deficits mainly to revenue

Mr. Wojnilower says that in the July-December 1971 period government expenditures amounted to only about $112 billion "and they would seasonally tend to be somewhat smaller" over the next six months. But the Nixon administration projected total spending for this fiscal year of mo than $236 billion. To reach that figure expendi-tures over the final six months would have to jump to about $125 billion, he said.

The rise is apparently to be accomplished (if it can be done) by shifting forward $8 billion or more of payments to defense contractors and to state and local governments from the summer to the spring. In addition the assumption is made (in the budget) that over $2 billion in revenue sharing funds will have been paid out by June 30, says Mr. Wojnilower.

"As a result of this bulge in spending the increase in spending for the next fiscal year is held to less than $10 billion when it would otherwise have been well over $20 billion," he notes.

If the government accelerated its spending in fiscal 1972 because it believes that the increased deficit will buoy the economy it may be in for a surprise, eccording to Mr. Wojnilower.

He noted that the recipients of the additional funds will not be getting any more money over the course of the calendar year. They will simply be getting it sooner.

They will not spend appreciably more, rather they will simply buy the extra short term securi-ties the Treasury will have to issue," he said. He added that the deficit will do little to prompt the Federal Reserve Board to pursue a more expansionist monetary policy, because the additional securities will more or less be absorbed by non-bank institutions and corporations, obviating the need for the Fed to finance the securities.

The impact on real gross national product growth, Mr. Wojnilower says, is likely to be adverse. The huge deficit will likely kindle infla-tion fears, partly because few people will believe that next year's spending increase will be as small as projected.

Although Mr. Wojnilower does not make a point of it in his study, many economists believe that expectations of a high rate of inflation cause people generally to save more rather than to

At the same time demand for business loans slumped by an-other $314 million at the 12 weekly reporting New York City banks, and loans at major Chicago banks fell by $96 million. The decline in loans here was the sixth in a row totaling $1.39 billion and raised the possibility of still another cut in the prime lending rate, which now stands at 4 3/4 percent. (Today First National City

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis disclosed that total reserves of Fed members have now risen at a 13.2 percent annual rate over the latest credit three months. The adjusted credit proxy has risen at a 13.4 percent rate over the same period and the monetary base bas risen at an 8.1 percent

These gains, all seasonally adjusted, are much more rapid than had prevailed in recent months. Only the money supply among the main indicators of this type still lags. It has grown at only a 1.8 percent annual rate since

With the tape running three minutes late at the bell, the Dow Jones industrial average finished at 906.38 with a gain of 6.55. It achieved a psychological victory by vaulting above the barrier at combination of rosy 1971 reports, expectations of 1972 profits and the more venturesome spirit of investors. Brokers noted that, in some cases, short covering was also a factor. Among the glamour gainers were ARA Services, up 5 to 165,

The overall statistics bore the trappings of a bull market with a whopping 143 highs and only 3 lows. As an extra dividend. the Big Board flashed this convincing sign: 1,009 winners and 460 losers. This means that market breadth—the compilation of advances and derlines—has im-proved greatly during the last two active sessions. Helping investor sentiment were cuts in the floating prime rate-to 4 1/2 percent frem 4 3/4 percent-by a pair of major New York banks. But viewed as more important in fueling the market's current advance was the Commerce Department report yesterday that leading economic indicators rose briskly during December. One of these climbing, incidentally, oc-

Go-Go Exchange Takes a Creaming on Diamond Futures

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 28 (AP-DJ).—When we left the West Coast Commodities Exchange, its colorful president and former public relations executive, David Callahan, was anticipating an enthusiastic public response to the go-go exchange's latest wrinkle—the world's first futures trading in dismonds. Mr. Callahan backed his conviction by plunging into the pits himself to buy dis mond contracts in anticipation that the price would rise. So did Sy Gaiber, a director and principal shareholder in the privately owned exchange. And, according to director DJ, MacKenzie, so did the other members of the board except him-

"They all got creamed terribly," says Mr. MacKenzie, who took a short position himself-meaning that he obligated himself to deliver a contract to a buyer at a set price, anticipating a price drop that would enable him to buy that contract more cheaply and thus deliver it at a profit.

The "shorts" have so far swept the field in diamond trading on the exchange. Indeed, the story of diamend trading since the first day intures were offered on Jan. 19 is the story of a commodity that has run wildly downward. Since closing at an average price of around $700 a carat the first day of trading, the 20-carat futures have declined the maximum allowed by the exchange, $30 a carat, every trading day through Tuesday, when directors huddled to try to halt the skid. The average price per carat had by then fallen to $590 and prices were unchanged Wednesday. Thursday, 62 contracts were traded and the price. dropped an average $560 a carat.

The exchange made two monumental. mistakes, brokers and diamond industry sources say. It counted on public participation to support prices, participation that simply has not materialized, and it placed far too high an initial value on the 20carat contracts.

The exchange got enthusiastic responses, all right, but most of it apparently came not from the man in the street but from incredulous diamond merchants. They could not believe the prices quoted the first day, when the principals of the exchange itself were buying futures and supporting prices, and they quickly besieged brokers with orders to go short. Futures prices kept tumbling then.

In the meantime, exchange principals who helved establish those high opening prices with their own futures purchases are locked into their long positions, able to sell only at a heavy loss and only then if they can find a buyer—usually a short covering his position. Trading has been scanty. On opening day, Jan. 19, 194 contracts changed hands. But this dwindled rapidly to only 11 contracts last Tuesday. when prices dropped the allowable maxi-mum so quickly that there was no time for much trading. Thursday, 88 contracts were traded, almost all of them longs selling out to shorts.

Mr. Galber, the bullish director, former chairman, and largest shareholder in the exchange, concedes he "got killed" in the stampede by the shorts, but bravely asserts that the trading is coming under control. Mr. Gaiber has weathered storms before he once lost $400,000 in egg and onion futures on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange and believes the short selling has about "dried up." He doesn't agree with jewelers' estimates that they can sell diamonds meeting exchange specifications at only $400 a carat. "Our certifier has already rejected seven contracts that trade people tried to deliver at about $400 a carat," he says. "They can't deliver below $500, in my opinion, and I still think the price will go up." Following Tuesday's meeting of exchange vise customers not to pile into the skidding diamond futures market. Previously, the exchange boosted margin requirements on each contract to $1,600 from $650 to discourage speculation. Director MacKenzie save that if prices continue to plummet, he expects further boosts in margins.

Not everybody, though. There is a certain Mr. P. in Los Angeles who thinks prices are going lower, and soon. Mr. P. says he made a killing by short-selling palladium and propane when they first ap-peared on commodities markets at what he considered excessive initial prices, and he sniffed out the same situation in diamonds. He is not planning to cover his short position until he has to. As far as the exchange principals are concerned, Mr. P. figures those who live by the sword can die by it. "Listen, they began trading in diamond futures for publicity," he says, "and they went into the market on that

How to gain the advantages of investment management for a $5,000 to $50,000 portfolio

If the money you have today is to grow in the filture toward more income, or for education, travel, leisure, retirement, it must be kept working full time to achieve your goals.

Yet you may find that you are actually losing ground due to inflation, taxes or lack of time for investment decisions.

To help solve this problem, cheats in 55 countries have turned to The Danforth Associates Investment Management Plan. It has, we believe, proved especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios of from $5,000 to $50,000-on behalf of people who recognize and can share the risks and rewards of common stock investments. The cost is modest, as low as $100 per year.

For a complimentary copy of a 42-page report describing this tested plan, its complete 10-year "performance record," and how it may help you now, simply write Dept. Q.69.

TOO MANY ENEMIES By William Haggard. Walker. 188 pp. $4.95.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

MAURICE PATER, member of Parliament, had the kind of honesty that bored everyone because it crowded almost everything else out of his personality. It had become his job to stand up and say things no one else wanted to because they were 50 obvious. When the two major parties were deadlocked, he could be counted on to recapitulate both sides of the question without prejudice, to fill a furious silence with a deadly fairness that made the other members too comatose to go on fighting. This was why, on the eve of the six-day war. an Arab lobby in London tried to bribe Pater to come over to their cause. The government was evenly divided on the Arab-Israeli issue, and Pater, of course, remained in the middle, saying things such as "Great wrongs have been done by each side to the other." If this nonentity, who had never ventured what could properly be called a personal opinion, could be persuaded to support the Arabs, he would be listened to. He couldn't even

This is the way William Hag-gard begins his latest suspense novel, "Too Many Enemies." But of course, Pater couldn't be bribed, so the Arabs tried another tack: scandal. In the middle of the night, two men and a woman invaded his bedroom; one of the men had a camera. The cameraman was dissatisfied with the first picture: Pater still had his pajamas on. The other man tore the top off and because he was poor and pajamas were ex-pensive, Pater himself removed the bottoms.

stodginess was so very British that it had a ring of authenticity.

The threat of scandal failed, too, because if it was carried out, Pater would then be useless to them. They tried roughing him up, and this failed as well, necause by now Pater had called for help. The war began, with the Arabs closing the Gulf of Aqaba, to force Israel's hand and make it appear to be the aggressor. Pater saw through the trans-parent move, and for perhaps the first time in his life was fired with a terrible passion, Eloquence suddenly flooded him, like lust. He made a speech and held the entire House in his hand. He would have to be killed.

This is where Charles Russell. retired head of British security, comes into the picture. The min-ister himself has asked for his advice: It was not a matter for the police. It was still too delicate for that. Russell is a fine character, the sort you find only in suspense novels written by British dons or retired government officers. Urbane, autocratic, iron-ical, he carries not a gun but a personality into his work. A knowledge of men-not karate, fast cars or technological tricks is his only weapon. He proceeds by letting his mind wander over the problems, like a good dog quartering a field.

When Maurice Pater goes to Johannesburg to attend his daughter's wedding, Russell goes too, and we find him comfortably napping, between crises, in the hotel's sunny garden. He even tells us how the thickness of the grass on the local golf course inhibits his iron shots. He likes to pinch the ball, but here you have to sweep it away. Details like these make you feel that Mr. Haggard's view of South African politics is just as closely observed.

To prove that he's no mere intellectual condescending to the genre, Mr. Haggard includes a chase, a satisfyingly exotic at-tempt on Pater's life, and the requisite shoot-out, with Russell listening to the assassin's last request in French and agreeing to carry it out. Being only part Arab, the dying man rejects me fanatical side with his last breath and asks for Christian buriel.

Maurice Pater's fate is settled. as happliy as such a man's can be, with a rich vein of irony running through the denouement Russell, sitting in his ciub back in London, eating an excellent lunch, is not dissatisfied to find himself retired once more from a public life that seems to grow sillier and less civilized all the

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (NYT) - in the first round of the playoffs Fron Tarkenton, the scrambling for two straight years, quarterback of the New York Tarkenton was care Giants for the last five seasons, was traded to the Minnesota vikings yesterday for three players and two draft choices.

Boh Grim, a wide receiver; Norm Shead, an experienced quarierheck, and Vince Clements, a running back from the University of Connecticut," were the players the Vikings gave to regain Tarkenton, who was their regular quarterback from 1961 through 1966. He came to the Giants in 1967 for four draft choices.

In addition, the Giantz received Minnesote's No. 1 draft turn for this year and No. 2 for next year. The Giants had previously traded away their first two picks in this year's draft which will be held lay, so their first two picks will be the Minnesota turn in the first round and their own turn in the third round. Tarkenton was eager to be traded because the Giants are years away from being a contender and he wants to win a championship before he retires. Tarkenton's days have been numbered in New York ever since he jumped camp in a salary dispute last summer just before the start of the first exhibition game. Tarkenton eventually signed but Giant owner Wellington Mars, an old-line NFL owner who regards his team as a "family," was an-hoyed at Tarkenton's action.

Snead, 32, was Washington's No. 1 draft choice in 1962. After his second season, he was traded to Philadelphia, where he played through 1970. His biggest year was 1967, when he threw 29 touchdown passes, completed 240 out of 434 for 55.3 percent and gained 3300 percent and gained 3300 percent province. gained 3,309 yards passing.

At Minnesota, he shared time with Gary Cuozzo and Bob Lee in what proved to be an unsatisfactory setup, but good enough to win the Central Division title. Grim was one of the players the Vikings drafted when they received New York's first two picks for 1967 and 1968 in exchange for Tarkenton. Her plea for a hearing drew no immediate response from IOC President Avery Brundage or other executive members. But five hours later, the three-member delegation was summoned back and given a 10-minute audience. "You showed great courage, madame," said Count Jean de Beaumont; one of the three IOC vice-presidents, referring to her Mrs. Brown requested permission to present her committee's had collected the 25,000 signatures in three weeks. She said, We are not anti-Olympic; we just don't want the games in Colorado. "We feel they would precipitate a population explosion which Colorado cannot handle. We question the priority of spending hundreds of millions of dollars on

Rally Won By Lancia Of Italians

Alpine Renaults Falter Near End

From Wire Dispatcher MONTE CARLO, Jan. 28.-Sandro Munari and Mario Manucci, driving a Lancia Pulvia, today became the first Italians to win the Monte Carlo Auto Rally in the event's 61-year-old history as the favored Alpine Renaults broke down during the final stage.

Frenchman Bernard Daniche, who led from the start of the final rally last night, abandoned with a broken gearbox just three hours from the finish. He and his team mate Alain Mahé had a lead of more than three minutes over the Andersson of Sweden, last year's winner, and John Davidson of Britain also went out with gearbox difficulties.

Munari and Manucci ended the 5,700-kilometer (2,300-mile) event 10 minutes 50 seconds ahead of Frenchmen Gérard Larrousse and Jean-Claude Perramond in a West German Porsche It was the third time in four years Lar-rousse had to settle for the No.2 spot. "What do I have to do to win," he said with a sad smile.

Only 34 of the 299 cars which set out a week ago from nine cities were classified as finishers. Britain's Mrs. Pat Moss Carlsson, sister of racing ace Stirling Moss, and her partner, Mrs. Liz Crellin, also of Britain, were the leading women finishers as they drove their Alpine Renault to tenth place. The first Alpine to finish the race was driven by the French pair of Bob Neyret and Jacques Terramorsi, who came home seventh in their privately owned car.

Pinland's Ranno Asltonen, with artner Jean Todt of France, finished third in a Japanese Dat-sun 249Z sports coupé, and after the race the Finn said: "It wasn't any harder than other years. They were the kind of conditions my wife drives on every day at home." Asitonen won the 1961 drove to fourth place with Swedish co-driver Solve Andersson in another Iancis, which placed three team cars in the top six. Two Alpine Renaults set out ahead of the Italians last night on the 570-kilometer (410-mile) stage of seven special speed tests on the snow and ice of the twisty mountain roads near Monaco. When the car driven by Darniche dropped out this morning, the Italians played it safe, "I knew then I could win. I just had to keep going so I slowed takes," said Munari after the race.

"We had everything possible prepared for this rally," Munarl. "If we won, it was he-cause we had the right tires at the right time."

Millrose Trail Often Leads to Gold

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, Jan. 23 (NYT).—In the Millrore Games of 1956, Lee Calhoun, Jack Davis and Joel Shankle finished one-two-three in the high hurdles. Ten menths later in Melbourne, the first three home in the Olympic hurdles were Calhoun, Davis and Shankle

Calhoun. Davis and shankle.

The Millrose 60 was the only sprint of consequence that Lindy Remigino won in 1952 until, in stimned disbelief, he heard the friendly Pinns of Helshiki hall him as the world's fastest human pro tem. Herb McKenley of Jamaica, human pro tem. England's MacDonald Beiley and Dean Smith of America shared Lindy's incredulity, for all four had been clocked in 10.4 seconds in the Olympic 100 meters.

Not many Americans had heard of Ralph Donbell when that Australian's closing burst won the Milirose half-mile in January of 1968 but Doubell was a household word in October when he tied Peter Snell's world record for 800 meters in the Mexico City Olympics.

In short, although winners in the 65th Mil-rose carnival tonight will still have certain formalities to observe before receiving Olympic gold medals, history has shown that this annual muscle dance in Madison Square Garden isn't a had place to start a pilgrimage to Munich.

Indeed, with a world record holder or Olympic champion in almost every race, with six milers who have broken four minutes, eight high jumpers who can top seven feet and seven pole vaulters who have cleared 17 feet, there is no way of guessing how many Olympic champions will be on displa; in the hatbox over Penn Station.

Although there is an element of risk in hetting on anything that can talk, it seems fairly safe to predict that the field for tonight's 60yard hurdles includes the man who will win over the fences in Munich next September. In the first place, it is taken for granted that an American hurdler will win at Munich be-cause an American almost always does. In the 75 years since the modern Games began, the event has been contested 16 times and only twice has the United States deviated from the gold standard. In 1920, a Dartmouth undergraduate named Earl Thomson won for Canada and in 1928 South Africa's Sid Atkinson hit the tape with three Yanks breathing on his neck Since then, the United States has hogged all the gold and some of the silver and brenze.

Tonight, the five hurdlers who have ranked 1-2-3 in the world over the last two years, plus the owner of the 1968 Olympic silver medal and the man who finished fourth in that race, are entered.

In 1970, Tom Hill of Arkansas State, Marcus Walker of Colorado and Willie Davenport, the 1968 Olympic champion, ranked first, second and third in the world. Last year, Rod Mil-burn replaced Hill in the troiks, Ron Draper of North Carolina Central took Walker's spot, and Davenport held his position.

Davemport owns at least a share of the record at every distance the hurdlers can run indoors. Milburn, his successor et Southern University in Baton Rouge, La. set a world record of 13 seconds fint over 120 yards in the Amateur Athletic Union championships outdoors in Eugene, Ore., last June.

An indoor meet in Monroe, La., in Decem-ber of 1976 took Hill out of competition for a year. The man in the next lane cought Tom's heel as they went over a hurdle and Hill wound up with a smashed knee. Coming back in the same meet last month, he did the job in a tidy 7.1 seconds. Walker won the Millrose over Davenport last January but then pulled a hamstring, from which he has recovered only recently.

Lining up with these five tonight will be Erv Hall, runner-up to Davenport in Mexico City, and Leon Coleman, fourth in the last

The Budget a Hoax?

Nixon, through a spokesman, said that the 1973 annual budget submitted to Congress was a forgery and he had nothing to do with it.

The book, which was purportedly written by George Shultz of the Office of Management and Budget, reveals in 1,103 pages the innermost secrets of the government's finances. Mr. shultz claimed this was the first time Mr. Nixon had authorized such a Buchwald volume and Mc-Graw-Hill and Life magazine had paid $362,000 for the rights to it-The budget director said he met with Mr. Nixon secretly all over the country and had taped the President's fiscal revelations over a period of six months.

Lawyers for Mr. Nixon said that the President had never heard of Mr. Shultz, had never authorized him to put out a budget, and had never received any checks from McGraw-Hill and Life for the book. Spokesmen at both McGraw-

Hill and Life said they have dandwritten documents from President Nixon attesting to the fact that the 1973 fiscal budget was authorized by him, and they planned to go ahead with printing it, no matter what Mr. Nixon's representatives said.
"There are things in this budget," a spokesman for Life said, "that only Mr. Nixon would know. Every page of it was initialled RMN and our handwriting experts insist that the writing corresponds to the President's"

Mr. Nixon's representatives say the whole thing is ridiculous. They insist that Mr. Nixon hesn't left Key Biscayne for six months and whomever Mr. Shultz talked

Swiss, at Last, Get Snow

SION, Switzerland, Jan. 28 (Reuters).—Heavy snow fell this week in the Valais canton of southwest Switzerland—to the relief of tourist officials, hotel keepers and ski school managers. The canton, which contains many of the country's leading winter resorts, has suffered a severe lack of snow since mid-De-

WASHINGTON.—President to was not the President of the United States.

To further substantiate the charges that the budget was a forgery, Mr. Nixon's public relations people set up a telephone press conference call from the President's hideout in Key Biscayne to seven reporters in Washington who had known Mr. Nixon personally.

In the press conference, Mr. Nixon said: "This must go down in history as the greatest yarn of all time.

"Anyone who is familiar with me knows that I would never ask for a $25.5-billion deficit. I also would never, in my wildest dreams, predict a national debt of $493 billion, which is an in-crease of $37.4 billion over 1970." The reporters who spoke to Mr. Nixon by phone all agreed it was his voice, and voiceprint tests verified that it was Mr. Nixon speaking. But Mr. Shultz stuck to his story that this was indeed President Nixon's budget and said his only guess as to why it was being denied now was that the President didn't want to be held responsible for it.

Adding to the mystery was the endorsements on the McGraw-Hill and Life checks for the rights to the story. The checks had been signed on the back "R. M. Nixon" and had been deposited in a Swiss bank.

The Swiss bank revealed that a blonde woman with a German accent had opened an account in the name of Rhods Mildred Nixon.

She had deposited the checks and then had withdrawn the money two weeks later. No one knows who the woman

s. Mr. Shultz's wife is not a blonde nor does she speak with a German accent, but there are other people in the White House

There are three theories making the rounds of Washington concerning the publication of the budget. Theory 1: The President agreed with George Shultz to write the budget message, but then his advisers got frightened and they decided to deny it; Theory 2: The budget is a hoax cooked up by the Democrats to defeat Mr. Nixon in 1972; Theory 3: Henry Kissinger made a secret trip to Geneva and bought a dress and a blonde wig at the airport.

Shirley MacLaine, who wore her own clothes and took the subway to work in her new film, "Desperate Characters."

The American (Ex) Dandelion

PARIS (IRT).—Shirley MacLaine has 'I tried to do was get the sense of pabeen an original from the start and so, for a long time, shr was labeled a kook, a word she traces to the Australian kookaburra, meaning the laughing jackass. She's a woman of wide range, in work and in life, "I am a long-distance runner," she says. For Shirley survival is growth, and her career has taken a giant leap forward with her new film, "Desperate Characa drama set in New York today in which she plays Sophie Bentwood, a woman who would rather continue in a hopeless marriags than face alone the blighted world outside, If, as the Glenda Jackson character says in "Sunday, Bloody Sunday," something is better than nothing, Shirley MacLeine shows with remarkable reticence what cold comfort just something can be.

"For someone who can be all over the place like a cheese omelette, it was very economical," she says of her performance. It should bring her a fourth Academy Award nomination and shelve the dumb word kooky forever.

"One of the things people like me suffer from is a confusion of images, unless you draw a definitive portrait which I think Sophie is," Shirley says. "I was thought of as fresh and bubbly, an American dandelion. Well, the flower's a little faded now."

Not that the new maturity squeiches the old spirit: "You'd be surprised at how To still like to push a peanut down the street with my nose."

"Desperate Characters," budgeted for an shsurdly low $350,000 and brought in for an absurdly lower $300,000, was abot in a house in Brooklyn Heights, with Shirley MacLaine wearing her own clothes and riding the subway to work each day. The supporting cast was little known and highly skilled. The director-producer-screenwriter, playwright Frank Gilroy, was making his directing debut.

Miss MacLaine is familiar enough with the urban nightmare (she has been robbed twice in London and five times in one year in New York and no longer owns even a wristwatch—or wants to. She is also expert on door locks and says the secret is to have three and leave one unlocked, the mathematical probability being that the burglar will go nuts before un-scrambling which is which). But the character of Sophie was very hard: "What ralysis without being boring," she says. "Desperate Characters" was financed by Sir Lew Grade (who also backed her forthcoming "The Possession of Joel Delaney," now under consideration for the Cannes Pestival, and her disastrous TV series) as soon as Shirley MacLaine announced her herself to a tyro director? "Because," she says, "I knew we'd all direct." Although Shirley believes in the director having the last word-"that's the only acceptable arena of dictatorship left" -much of "Desperate Characters" was a group effort:

The notion that an actor sees only his trees and not the forest and that the writer only cares about his crossed Ts is finished. We're changing, we're all grown-up.

This notion of taking risks to have true independence is new and encouraging, as Penelope Gilliatt wrote in her New Yorker review of "Desperate Characters:"

"If this picture makes its money back and goes on to do as well as it should something will have been proved about the kind of film that can be made as long as people aren't greedy. Novelists and poets and painters are ready to work on spec-why not people involved in film...?"

Invited this winter by Yale's Kingman Brewster to speak to the graduating class on a subject of her choice (she chose in-dividual freedom), Shirley MacLeine was asked during question time what she thought of Hollywood today. She replied that with a few exceptions it was out of touch with today's culture, a remark that was picked up and inaccurately reprinted along with an attack on Miss Maclaine for hiting the hand that fed her.

The attack hurt, especially the suggestion of being anti-Hollywood. "I'm a Holly-wood product," Shirley says. "That place enabled me to work, to find out what I am in my profession. All I want to be is contributive to tt.

"To be out of touch with the culture is hard to explain, but everybody who makes a film has a view of his project. If halfway through that project they get intimidated and begin to infuse their intention with what they think will be the going rate that year, they contaminate the product end they contaminate the culture that they are a part of."

Recent films that she feels are very much a part of today's culture include

"The Prench Connection," "Shaft," "Willard," and, above all, Stanley Kubrick's

The Clockwork Orange."
"We'll have to evaluate everything we do as prior-'Clockwork Orange' and post-'Clockwork Orange' she says, 'Tt's devas-tating. I stood on line to see it for six days in New York. Finally I called the theater manager and said I was the Queen of England and could I have a seat."

An early activist in many fields, Shirley devotes most of her spare time and money these days to planned parenthood and chose this as her subject when she became the first woman to address the National Democratic Club. She is also working on Sen. George McGovern's presidential campaign and gets cross with those who say why bother, he can't win.

"Are we in the business of winners or Presidents? If you want an actor, elect John Wayne. If you want a President, elect someone whose moral fortitude is commensurate with the office. Anyway, he's not exactly running against Mr. Charisma in Nixon."

And somehow, in odd moments, Shirley MacLaine is working on a sequel to her best-selling memoir, "Don't Pall off the Mountain," though she is thinking of making this volume into a novel.

"I'm looking for a way to tell the truth without hurting anybody. I'm really dangerously truthful I don't mean I have a franchise on the truth, but it manifests itself in the way I write.

She is less interested now in protecting herself. "People should understand what they don't understand," Shirley MacLaine says. "How are we ever going to progress if we can't blow the whistle on ourselves?"

GREAT SRITAIN

PEOPLE: A Tale of Domestic Savages

Things were a little lonely around the Surbiton, England, homestead of Mrs. Boreen Chamberisin, so she applied to the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals for a couple of "cuddly kittens." What she got has put her in mind of starting a local chapter of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Dorcen Chamberlain, "First they ran up our curtains, clawed at the carpet and even managed to climb up the wall," related Doreen's daughter Stephanie in the aftermath of the affair. Then the trouble really started. The "cuddly kittens" high-tailed it up the chimney and refused to come down-for five action-packed days. Among the ploys used by Mrs. Chamber-lain, the RSPCA and the fire department: (1) a saucer of milk in the hearth (it went sour), (2) open French doors in mid-winter (the family had to vacate the living room), (3) a lighted fire (it smoked, was all), (4) a cat-trap baited with kippers (they stank).

Finally, two agile and intrepld firemen climbed the Chamberlain roof and pegged stones down the chimney at the kits. Down they came, one of them biting an RSPCA inspector on the hand before being caught and the other disappearing, possibly through the French doors, probably for all time.

Mrs. C., meanwhile, was taking no chances. As a precaution, she called in a chimney sweep to finsh out any ghosts of her wayward pets, then sued the RSPCA for $130 damages. "It was awful," summed up Stephanie, Those cate were wild, Just a couple of snarling savages."

Wealthy American singer Lovelace Watkins, 34, revealed this week in London that he plans to marry Anne Marie FitzSimmons, a 23-year-old train engineer's daughter from Salford, England.
